IDFPR Launches New Website

CHICAGO - Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation (IDFPR) Secretary Bryan Schneider today announced the launching of IDFPR's new website as part of his agency's ongoing efforts to increase transparency and provide a more responsive regulatory experience. The updated website offers a mobile-friendly, intuitive design to provide easier access to the Department's online services, according to Schneider.

"In a world where e-government and digital platforms have become commonplace, it is imperative that our state's regulatory agency update its outdated technology," said Schneider. "With the new website, our goal is to deliver a customer-oriented, functional experience with a clean, modernized and mobile-friendly layout. The new site will provide regulated professionals, businesses, financial institutions, and consumers easy access to a number of streamlined services."

Updated services include:

- "easy-access buttons" to the highest traffic pages
- Direct tabs to the individual divisions
- A visible search tool and an updated 'contact us' page
- Modernized renewal and application pages for licensed professionals, and an updated 'file a complaint' section
